MAJOR ALPIN'S ANCESTORS.

THE FAMILY OF GRANT.

The Grants begin to be noticed in English history in the 12th century. Their name was possibly Le Grand, and they may have accompanied William in 1066, or followed soon afterwards with the crowd of Normans (including a "Robert Grante") who came to profit by the conquest of England. This, however, is little more than conjecture, and a purely Celtic origin has been claimed for the Clan.

The name appears in Scotland in the middle of the 13th century, and we find Sir LAURENCE GRANT, sheriff of Inverness in 1263.

JOHN GRANT, believed to have been the son of Sir Laurence, was taken prisoner at the battle of Dunbar, 1296, but was liberated in 1297, and in 1316 obtained a charter of the lands of Inverallan in Strathspey from John of Inverallan.

PATRICK GRANT, of Stratherrick and Inverallan, son of John, appears between 1345 and 1362. Possibly another son of John was Sir JOHN GRANT, taken prisoner at Homildon Hill, 1333, and knighted before 1357.

MALCOLM GRANT, son of Patrick, is mentioned in 1394 as in possession of a twenty merkland near Inverness. ROBERT GRANT, possibly a son of Sir John, was sent on an embassy to France in 1389 and again in 1391.

ELIZABETH GRANT, Lady of Stratherrick, daughter of Malcolm, in 1433 disposed to her grandson John Seres all her lands including Inverallan. A JOHN GRANT, who is supposed to have been a son of Robert and who may have been the John Grant, Sheriff of Inverness in 1434, married Matilda Comyn, daughter of Gilbert of Glencairnie, by whom he had

Sir DUNCAN GRANT, I. of Freuchie, knighted between 1457 and 1464. Freuchie was a barony, and for generations after Sir Duncan's time was the family designation. He died in 1485 having married Muriel, daughter of Malcolm X. of Mackintosh, by whom he had a son

JOHN GRANT, apparent of Freuchie, to whom in 1482, Patrick Seres, son of John Seres above mentioned, disponed the lands of Inverallan. He predeceased his father in 1484, leaving a son

JOHN GRANT, II. of Freuchie, "Am Bard Ruadh." It was under the Bard that the Grants first established themselves in Urquhart and Glenmoriston. The original barony of Urquhart, dating from the early part of the 14th century, and including Glenmoriston, was erected into a Lordship 100 years later, and had been held by the Lords of the Isles from 1394 to 1476. In Glenmoriston the Macdonalds for years opposed the Grants, and kept the lands waste. In 1482 the Bard became tenant of the Lordship, and in 1509 James IV. granted him a charter of a new Barony of Urquhart; to his second son JOHN, "Iain Og", (by Margaret, daughter of Sir James Ogilvie of Deskford) a charter of a Barony of Corrimony (Grants of Corrimony, p. 11); and to his natural son (by a daughter of Stuart of Kincardine) JOHN, "Iain Mor", a charter of a Barony of Glenmoriston. The Bard's eldest son, JAMES, succeeded him as III. of Freuchie and from him are descended the Grants of Grant, now Earls of Seafield.

INVERMORISTON HOUSE, FROM LOCH NESS.

THE GRANTS OF GLENMORISTON.

The Barony of Glenmoriston included the lands of Conechane, Craskie, Aonach, Auchlayn, Dulchreichard, Duldragyn, Innerwick, Blarie, Inver [moriston], Coulnakirk, and others. The grantee had to pay to the king a yearly feu-duty of £27 6s. 8d. Scots, to provide and maintain nine horsemen for royal service in time of war beyond the kingdom, and at the King's command to convene with all fencible persons dwelling on his lands.

1. JOHN, his successor.
2. ALEXANDER, designed in Blairy in 1695. According to information supplied in August 1835, by the late James Murray Grant, XII. of Glenmoriston, this Alexander "married a Gairloch woman against the wish of all his relations, they not knowing who she was, or who were her connections in Gairloch. In consequence of this dispute with his friends, Alexander Grant left his native place and never returned ; and had it not been for a song, composed by his wife, and still sung in the Glen, no trace of him could have been found. After Alexander left Glenmoriston, his friends being anxious to know something about the Gairloch woman, made enquiry through Sir Alexander Mackenzie, laird of Gairloch, and found that she was great-grand-daughter of the laird of Gairloch ; her name was Janet McKenzie, daughter of Thomas McKenzie of Rhu, Gairloch, son of Captain Alexander McKenzie, son of the [fifth] laird of Gairloch." Tradition further narrates that Alexander lived at first in Glenshee, and afterwards in Castleton of Braemar.* A son,

* In the Invermoriston burying ground is a tombstone bearing the following inscription : "Sacred to the memory of Alexander Grant, son of John Grant, fifth laird of Glenmoriston, and to his spouse Janet Mackenzie, grand-daughter of Captain Alexander Mackenzie of Gairloch : ancestors of Captain George Grant of the Indian Navy, who has erected this monument as a token of affection, esteem and regard, with which he cherishes their memory. They died in Braemar about the year of our Lord, 1730. [Erected] 1840." This Captain George Grant was the son of James Grant (and his wife Jane Hadden), who was the son of ii. He fought in 1689 at Killicrankie † by the side of Sir Ewen Cameron, and in 1715 at Sheriffmuir by the side of Alisdair Dubh, chief of Glengarry, whose life he was the means of saving. For taking part with the Jacobites, his estates were forfeited under the Act 1 Geo. I. cap. 42, and remained in possession of the Crown till 1732, when they were sold to Ludovic Grant, second son of the Laird of Grant, but then known as Ludovic Colquhoun of Luss.

* To whose courtesy the compiler is indebted for the perusal of his brother Charles' Memoirs.

† James Philip of Almerieclose thus describes Iain a Chragain among the followers of Dundee, contrasting his fidelity with the disloyalty of his kinsman, Grant of Grant, who followed the "Orange tyrant."

His quoque se comitem Morisina ex valle ferebat
Grantius egregius bello, non degener ille
Grantiades Balli dictus de nomine castri,
Qui Batavi partes prædonis, et arma secutus
Sustulit Auriaci vexilla nefanda tyranni.
Ille sed incoctum fido qui gestat honestum
Pectore, Cæsareos Urquhartius acer in hostes.
Magnorum usque adeo mores imitatus avorum
Corripit arma manu, Regi inconcussus acerbis
Temporibus laturus opem, perque invia montes
Scandit inacessos, magnoque in bella paratus
Arduus agmen agens graditur, quem Grantia pubes
Ordine servato ductorem in castra secuta est.
